Legal

While blockchain based tokens currently fall in unregulated markets and have no regulatory clarity, some countries like Australia & Japan have legalised payments through Bitcoin and other cryptocurrencies. Many other countries have taken an open stand on cryptocurrencies and may regulate them in the future. Several mainstream exchanges in North America such as CBOE, Bitpayexchange and CME have started trading derivatives on Bitcoin. The recent uptick in market value of several cryptocurrencies has made regulators all over the globe look more seriously at crypto-currencies. Apple Blockchain Coin does not aim to be an end to end player in Banking and financial services industry but only aims to provide community driven tools to the existing or authorised entities to solve real problems. Apple Blockchain Coin aims to be fully compliant with the laws of the land and work with authorized entities in various geographies. Apple Blockchain Coin also plans to work with the Governments, regulators and lawmakers to define various aspects of the blockchain applicability to the financial sectors.
